Sunday Reflection from Fr. Silvester O'Flynn OFM Cap. Diocese of Cork & Ross

Matthew 11:25, "I bless you, Father, Lord of heaven and earth, for hiding these things from the learned and clever and revealing them to mere children." It's easy to return thanks when things are going well and we are aware of God's favours but it takes great faith to give thanks when matters are not going smoothly. The context of today's Gospel is the sadness Jesus felt when people who, although they witnessed his healing miracles, still refused to repent.

Many of those who regarded themselves as learned and clever would not accept the teaching of Jesus. Yet, at this disappointing moment, Jesus found a reason for giving thanks. There were other people who took his teaching to heart with childlike trust. He thanked the Father for these trusting, unsophisticated people. After thanking the Father, Jesus then opened his arms inviting people to come to him. This is surely one of the most comforting passages of the bible. "Come to me all you who labour and are burdened and I will give you rest." The pace set by Jesus is to be gentle and humble of heart. You too will have to be gentle with yourself in dealing with your past. You too will have to be humble and totally honest about yourself. It is the truth that will set you free. You will find peace. There is no burden that cannot be carried when we combine with Jesus.
